

ABSTRACT

Techniques for identifying properties of interest include providing an input device configured to receive parameters relating to real property and a property database that contains records on substantially every residential property in a defined geographic region. In various embodiments, each entry of the property database can include an identifying field identifying a specific property as well as an automated valuation field containing an AVM produced value of the identified property.